New Columbia Solar Continues to Reshape Commercial Solar Energy Financing through $75M Fund Dedicated to Washington, DC Projects

The deal will add 50 new projects to the solar company's portfolio and to the city at-large

Washington, DC February 23, 2021 - New Columbia Solar ("NCS"), Washington, DC's leading solar energy company, announced that it has closed its second tax equity deal with Franklin Park Infrastructure as well as a loan facility provided by Amalgamated Bank and Live Oak Bank. The new financing, together with NCS's own investment into the portfolio, will comprise a $75M portfolio of DC-based solar projects, adding approximately 50 projects to NCS's existing operating portfolio of over 150 solar projects under management.

With this new capital raise, NCS is on track to achieve its vision of deploying $120 million into the local solar market across 2020 and 2021, helping to mitigate climate change, create local jobs, and reduce the electricity bills for thousands of DC residents and businesses in the process. The new tax equity partnership and debt facilities will directly contribute to the development of additional rooftop, carport, and ground-mounted solar energy projects, generating clean electricity to power the equivalent of nearly 2,000 homes and offsetting over 10 metric tons of carbon dioxide emissions annually for the next 20 years. New Columbia Solar also expects to hire an additional 10-20 people this year, adding to the 60 local residents currently employed. Moreover, this fund, in combination with NCS's proprietary software product and toolsets, is a critical element to enabling the company to continue to push the boundaries of the untapped commercial and industrial solar market.

Mike Healy, CEO & Co-Founder of NCS remarked, "This financing enables NCS to continue to increase the city's clean energy supply, modernize the city's electricity grid, repair and replace the roofs, and increase access to solar energy for residents and businesses across the District. Our partnership with Franklin Park, Amalgamated Bank, and Live Oak Bank empowers us with capital structured for the unique needs of the commercial and industrial solar space, and a pathway to expand our presence in Washington, DC." Sam Walker, VP of Finance at NCS added, "We're proud of the renewed investments from our reputable financial partners, which underscores the resilience of our business model and the significant growth we've achieved over the last 24 months."

Kevin Lapidus, CIO of Franklin Park, said, "The NCS tax equity investment demonstrates Franklin Park's ability to provide a full suite of capital for renewable energy development companies, including corporate equity, pre-NTP project development capital, tax equity and project acquisitions." Raj Mehta of Franklin Park added, "We are pleased to work with NCS on year two of our two-year tax equity commitment for commercial and industrial solar projects."

"Deploying renewable energy resources in the District of Columbia is important to Amalgamated Bank," said Ivan Frishberg, Director of Impact Policy, Amalgamated Bank. "Our work with New Columbia Solar is a great example of how the finance sector can be a partner in solving the crisis of climate change and building cleaner, more resilient communities."
